WILLOW GROVE PARK.

STEWART'S BOSTON CONCERT BAND.

To-morrow, Sunday, for the first time, Willow Grove Park audiences will have an opportunity to hear Stewart's Concert Band of Boston. Although this organization is of National repute their present engagement at Willow Grove Park is their first appearance in or near Philadelphia.

Emil Mollenhauer, the leader, comes from a family of distinguished musicians. His ability as a pianist and violinist has attracted much attention in New York. At the age of fifteen Mollenhauer was personally invited by Theodore Thomas to occupy a position as first violinist in his famous orchestra, which, by the way, has just closed a three weeks' engagement at Willow Grove Park. He was later a prominent violinist in the famous Boston symphony orchestra under Wilhelm Gericke.

Stewart's Boston Band originated in 1888, when George W. Stewart of Boston, called together fifty of the best instrumentalists in Boston, with a view of organizing a military band which should not only excel any previous Boston or New England band, but should also rival the great military bands of the world. That the effort was successful was evidenced by the immediate popularity with which the several seasons' concerts on the Boston Common were received.

Emil Mollenhauer, who had by this time completed a musical education which covered a period of twenty years, was chosen conductor. The unusual efficiency of the organization was immediately evidenced and each year saw their popularity increase. In 1904 the band augmented to 85, played a ten weeks' engagement at the St. Louis Exposition. It was then conceded by a number of prominent musicians and critics that Stewart's Band was the foremost American organization of its kind. The personnel of the band includes virtuosi, men who are known as Boston's best musicians. The repertoire is most extensive and there is no question that a body of musicians which has met with such universal favor in Boston and elsewhere will be able to please the thousands of music lovers who go to Willow Grove Park.

J. Ira Fisher will close his barber shop at noon on July 4th.

During the summer months the coal yard and office of J. Dyer, Toyer's will be closed at one p. m. on Saturdays.

MAD DOG BIT CHILDREN.

Also Attacked Other Dogs Before Being Shot.

Residents in the vicinity of Rushland and Wycombe were treated to a lively mad dog scare. The dog, belonging to J. C. Hinkle, near Rushland, was bitten by a rabid dog about a year ago but so many months having passed they had ceased watching his movements. For a few days past he had been acting strangely and on Tuesday was attacked with hydrophobia. Passing through Rushland he bit two little boys, Leighton and Arthur Fisher, playing near the mill, and continued on toward Wycombe, where he bit several dogs among them a valuable bird dog owned by Amos C. Patterson. "The mad dog was shot and killed by John Smith of Wycombe. Dr. John N. Rosenberg sent the head to Philadelphia for analysis, which proved the dog to have been pronounced hydrophobic. Of the two little boys, about five and six years of age, only one suffered any serious illness. This was Arthur, only child of Howard Fisher, who is being treated at his home by Dr. Charles L. Lay, of Wycombe.

MAN BRUTALLY BEATEN, FIVE RIBS CRUSHED IN, ARM TWICE BROKEN, HEAD CUT, LUNG PUNCTURED.

Benjamin Coons, the Victim of Brutal Assault, Lay Unattended in Barn Yard for Hours—Died in Morning—James Jamison, His Assailant, Is in Jail Awaiting Trial for Murder—Drunken Farm Hands in Fatal Fight—Details of Case.

At an early hour last Sunday morning tenants on the William J. Halliwell farm, on the Doylestown place, south of the County Line, in Horsham township, were aroused by the noise of a fight. There was a great racket for a short time and then everything was quiet. In the morning when the farm hands went to the barn a man was found lying on the ground, very drunk. He was lying under the wagon shed and seemed to be too badly injured to give a coherent account of how he was hurt.

It was soon learned that the man was Benjamin Coons, a neighboring farmer. Coons presented a pitiable sight with a gash across the upper part of his face and blood matted in his hair and over his clothing.

It was not at first thought that Coons' injuries were of fatal character. Mr. Halliwell had the blood washed off Coons' face, but thinking he was sleeping off a drunk did not stir him. Later Mr. Halliwell sent one of his men, James Jamison, to the Hughes place to tell them to send their hired man, but Jamison returned and said that Hughes said that he had discharged the Coons.

A telephone message was sent to Constable Palmer of Horsham. Before Palmer arrived Coons died at 8 a. m. In the meantime it was learned from Jamison that he had caused the undertaking establishment of W. E. Walton, Hatboro. Discovered four or five ribs broken on each side of spinal column on both sides. Compound fractures, one rib running through lung. Died from hemorrhage and shock from wounds received to the chest. Other injuries being secondary. Though bones on left arm fractured. Thought deceased was killed from being jumped upon. The blows did not cause death.

William J. Halliwell found Coons in morning under wagon house, groaning and suffering, but thought him too drunk to disturb, and left him to sober up. On his second visit to the man, he became alarmed, and after examination found his wrist broken. Coons was unconscious. Washed blood off his face and made him as comfortable as possible. He phoned to Constable Palmer of Radcliff, of Horsham township, after Coons was dead. In the meanwhile, Constable George R. Palmer of Hatboro, who also had been notified, appeared and made arrest. Halliwell sent Jamison to the Hughes place no to go home, telling him he had no business there and to come and get body.

Amos Moore, farmer for Halliwell, saw Coons when he lay in barn, but said nothing to him. Jamison told Moore that he "had used him up that way." Moore thought Coons was drunk and paid very little attention to him. James Gungason, the conductor on the 12:45 trolley car from Willow Grove for Doylestown could not identify Jamison as one of the two men he had let off at Halliwell on Saturday night.

Thornton Stockhouse testified to finding bones in lane about 1:30 a. m. Sunday morning. He said from what he heard he was under the impression that Jamison was trying to get Coons to go home, telling him he had no business there. Heard blows and screaming. Jamison called to Stockhouse, stating that Coons had cut him in eye, and he had no business there. Stockhouse told Jamison to leave Coons alone, which he did, so far as he could hear and see.

John Hughes, the man who Coons worked for, testified he was in his employ eight days. Had paid him $8. on Saturday night. Coons left the farm.

came from Edge Hill neighborhood. He was a slight man about 55 years old, and was not quarrelsome. Jamison, the man charged with inflicting the fearful injuries upon Coons, is about 35 years old and rather short and heavy set. He is well-known in Hatboro, where he had been employed by several persons. He lost his job because he would not keep sober. When drunk he was of quarrelsome disposition. He is said to have told others that he had been locked up before for trouble with another man. He has a scar on his face, which he claims was made by a man in a fight. Jamison has been known also as James Taggart.

Investigation of the case that Coons and Jamison had been seen drinking together at Willow Grove Saturday night, also that Coons had about $8 in money and a watch when he left the house of his employer, Mr. Hughes, the hearing before Judge Stockman at Hatboro Town hall on Wednesday afternoon was largely attended. Jamison was brought up from Abington police station, handcuffed, by Constable Palmer.

First witness was Dr. A. H. Read, Norristown, who made a full statement of the examination given Coons at the undertaking establishment of W. E. Walton, Hatboro. Discovered four or five ribs broken on each side of spinal column on both sides. Compound fractures, one rib running through lung. Died from hemorrhage and shock from wounds received to the chest. Other injuries being secondary. Though bones on left arm fractured. Thought deceased was killed from being jumped upon. The blows did not cause death.

WHO SHALL PAY FOR SEWERS?

Editor of Spirit:—

In your issue of June 10th, you have an editorial on the question of "Sewers for Cheltenham." As you have placed this matter before your readers, it is for them to determine whether this system should be built at the taxpayers' expense or by private parties, at no expense to the township.

You state that it will be the duty of the voters of Cheltenham to determine which of the two systems shall be accepted by the voters. In order that the voters may vote intelligently on this subject, they should know the facts thoroughly as to both methods before voting. It is a subject which should certainly be taken up very thoroughly so that there may be no doubt as to which is to be the best interest of the taxpayers in the future.

The first question which arises is, "What is to be the cost of the installation of a sewerage system?" How much will it add to the bonded indebtedness of the Township? "How is the interest on this extra debt to be met?" "Can the Township pay interest on this extra debt over receipts without sacrificing other important interests?" "Who should be the people to be affected by the installation of a sewerage system?" "Do the voters know that if this system of sewerage is installed by the same method as other townships have installed theirs, that the property holders throughout the township will have to pay increased taxes to pay the interest on this bonded indebtedness?" "Also, that every property holder in front of property the sewer passes, or through whose property it runs, whether a street or otherwise, will have to pay a price per foot frontage?"

Do they also know that if they own on both sides of a street or road, or if they own a lot through or over any part of their land (farm or other property) in order to reach certain other property to obtain proper drainage, whether they desire it or not, they are liable for the payment for frontage on both sides of the sewer, at a cost per foot front?"

It is said that in Lower Merion Township, where the sewer is 30 cent per lineal foot, for each side of a property bordering on the sewer, and if the same is not paid, a lien is filed against the property and bears interest until same is paid, whether sewer is used or not. If sewer is used, in addition to the payment of sewer, interest on bonded indebtedness, which must be paid by taxpayers, in addition to payment of frontage, it is also usual to compel all users of sewer to pay a sewer rental. There is a fact which should be known in order to vote on this sewer question intelligently.

There is another side of the question, viz: FIRST—Should this sewer be built by private parties, it would cost the Township nothing there would be no bonded indebtedness, therefore, no interest to pay.

SECOND—Farmers or others who do not use sewers, pay nothing. THIRD—Only the users pay for the use of the sewer and that at a rate to be submitted and approved by the Committee of your Township. JUSTICE TEMPERED WITH MERCY

Jail Term Hard on Prisoner and Further Prosecutions Withdrawn.

As Patrick Shay was leaving the Philadelphia county prison at Holmesburg, on Friday last, he was arrested by Sergeant Ganley and Morris, of the Cheltenham police.

Some five years or more ago Shay had terrorized the people of Melrose and Oak Lane by his clever thefts and skill in housebreaking. At that time he was caught while operating in Philadelphia and sentenced to eight years and it was on good behavior that his time was up.

The rearrest was on the charges of those residing in the vicinity of Ogontz and when Shay was brought to the Cheltenham police station he looked so badly from his stay in jail that none of the prosecutors had the heart to appear against him, and after being heard before Justice Haines, he was discharged.

Among those who were interested in him were: Rev. Mr. Coles, L. A. Nagle and Ebenezer Carrie, of Stratford. Shay said he would rather be shot than go back for another term in jail. At the time of his commitment he was a robust man, but now he is a feeble, stooped old man, with a fearful pallor.

NEW HOTEL FOR NORRISTOWN.

Modern Hotel to Take the Place of the Old Rambo House.

The Real Estate Committee of the Board of Commerce of Norristown has endorsed the project of building a modern hotel at Swede and Penn streets in Norristown, on the site now occupied by the Hotel Rambo, a hostelry which dates from the Colonial times. The plan of building a hotel is being promoted by C. F. Seelinger, who is organizing a company to carry out the project. The new hotel which will be known as the Rambo House, will have a frontage on Swede street of 117 feet, with a depth on Penn street to Cherry of 150 feet. It will be built round a courtyard opening on Cherry street, thereby affording ample light and air for each one of the 120 sleeping rooms which the hotel will contain. Plans for the building have been completed by Watson & Huckle, architects. Its cost will be about $100,000. The building will be strictly modern in all its appointments, with efficient elevator service, and a roof garden, which it is believed will be well patronized.

Little difficulty is expected in raising the necessary capital in Norristown, a number of business men in the town having already agreed to subscribe to the stock. The present hotel of Norristown, when compared favorably with those of any of the smaller towns in the State, but it is believed that a modern first-class hotel is an essential in view of the rapid growth of the town.

STORIES FOR IDLE HOURS

The Abershaw Diamonds

An International Engagement and What Came of It

By HOWARD FILLING

Mrs. Linwood Farrington in the course of a visit to England, where she had the honor of being presented at court, discovered the impetuous young Earl of Abershaw and decided to make her daughter Vera a countess. Vera was quite willing. She wanted to be a countess. It seemed to her better, and she really liked the Earl of Abershaw's appearance. He looked a rascal to any one who understands the rudiments of physiognomy, but it would be hard to conclude that Vera had a preference for rascals.

Vera is of the type of girl most difficult to understand, one of those to whom the extremes of life are all of it. If a gleam of real intelligence illuminates her progress through the complicated social evolutions in which she takes part, she is decided. And yet we hear people ask how a young girl can marry such a man as Abershaw.

What did Vera know of Abershaw's character? She never had a glimpse of the meaning of the word.

As for the earl himself, he was delighted with his luck. He took it as an excited gambler takes a turn of the cards in his favor at the moment when his last coin is on the table.

Abershaw, however, was a man of considerable ability. It is surprising to learn that in youth he was a hard student, with a taste for science, and that even now he has a little laboratory of his own where he seeks refuge and relaxation after excess. When his eye first caught the yellow gleam of the Farrington millions he was in an extremely hazardous position, but the stimulus of hope steadied his nerves and cleared his head. His case was so desperate that he could not even wait for the marriage. He was obliged not only to make a favorable impression upon Mr. Linwood Farrington, who came to England in response to Mrs. Farrington's summons, but to borrow money of his prospective father-in-law. In this double task the young earl succeeded, and among other results of his triumph was the redemption of the Abershaw jewels, upon which a money lender had fastened his clutches.

The jewels represented no great fortune. The chief article in the collection was a stonemason of diamonds worth perhaps $50,000, and for various reasons, very well known in England, Abershaw positively had to ransom this because he had involved himself in a mesh of falsehood about it. Mrs. Farrington had almost been driven to the point of getting up a bogus burglary to account for its absence when Mr. Farrington's generosity intervened. In a casket of ebony and silver the stonemason crossed the Atlantic with the Farringtons and the Earl of Abershaw, and was eventually deposited in a safe in the Farrington mansion in New York. It was to be the earl's wedding gift to his bride.

Arriving in our metropolis, his pockets well lined for the moment with the remains of the Farrington loan, Abershaw began to cut quite a figure in that strange and painful mixture of odds and ends which is all that remains of society, with a capital S. Here he fell at once under the influence of certain wise advisers who gave him tips on Wall Street and the inevitable happened. He lost the money.

He dared not approach Farrington again so soon nor confess his folly. The ultimate state was too large to be risked in this way. Yet he must have money. Abershaw was at his wife's end and tortured by a peculiar temptation which I will disclose.

The earl has an uncommon pair of eyes. He can see farther than a fish hawk. He sat on a table one day when Mr. Farrington was opening the safe where the Abershaw diamonds reposed, and he saw every point of the combination. An ordinary man would not have looked and could not have seen, but to Abershaw it was like reading the morning paper.

Now, aside from the stonemason, there were in the safe a few other pieces in separate cases, any of them worth enough to tide the earl over his present difficulty. What he eventually did after enduring his penury for some days was to take a diamond bracelet from the safe and exchange it for a duplicate in paste. The work was done overnight, for the piece was extremely simple, and Abershaw was well satisfied with the proceed. He had, indeed, been treated very liberally in order that he might return.

This was very "easy" money, and the most of it was lost in a single evening at cards. Next night he visited the Farrington safe again and secured a brooch, which promptly became paste.

The evil spirit dwelling in the man's breast exulted at these paltry crimes. But there was not very much in the safe. Mrs. Farrington and Vera had not yet taken their fortune from the vault in which they deposited them immediately after returning from abroad. Only a small sum in cash was ever kept in the house, and the stonemason was the only prize worthy of such an effort.

The time came, however, when Abershaw was forced to look upon that heirloom as his only salvation from ruin. But the stonemason was too glad-ome to be copied in paste within a reasonable time. If taken for this purpose its absence might very likely be missed. If money was to be raised upon it the thing must either be sold or pledged. But how could this be managed?

Abershaw revolved the problem in his mind for a day or two and then was suddenly favored with a luminous idea. He observed one evening a suspicious looking man engaged in a study of the Farrington house from the side street, where there is a small paved court with a fountain adorned with a statue of Mercury. The windows of the room into whose wall the safe is built look out upon this court, and it seemed to Abershaw that the man was studying those windows and the wall below them.

That night Abershaw was on watch from his own windows, which commanded the court, and he saw the same man who had been there in the afternoon pass several times between 11 and half past 1 o'clock. Abershaw went down to the study, where the safe was, and secured the casket containing the stonemason. He secured the valuable saw, carefully measured the interior of the casket and restored it, empty, to the safe.

It may be that Abershaw was especially nervous on this occasion. It may be that he had taken too much champagne to brace his courage. The fact is that he moved with less caution than usual and was heard. He had seen the man studying the safe, and it is appropriate that she should have passed without notice. She makes very little noise in the world. She is one of those unknown heroines who in the midst of luxury and selfishness refuse to be contaminated and persist in living usefully with a full realization of their duties and responsibilities.

The window was open beside her. After she realized her peril, or, at least, the obvious part of it. She did not know that a danger immeasurably greater lay in the ebony box which she held in her hand.

Yet the box was the source of the danger in one case just as in the other. If the man should shoot her it would be for that. The trained mind of the girl worked with a beautiful precision and pointed to the way of safety.

"I tell you," she said, "that this thing is of no value."

"You lie," he answered. "I know what is in it. Give it to me."

"Nonsense!" she returned. "I'll show you how much I think about it."

After much meditation she decided that first she must be sure of her ground. Abershaw might have changed his plans. He might have changed his stomacher in its original condition to the safe. She must know whether this was so, and she decided to find out immediately. She could open the safe. It was best to do so once, if only for her own satisfaction. So she went softly downstairs.

Meanwhile the clockwork in the ebony casket was ticking at a merry pace and rapidly approaching the point where it would release the awful power of the chemical that lay beside it.

Adelaide entered the room, which had once been called the "study." At the side nearest the court, there was a table between the two windows, and beside this table, with his back to the girl, there stood a man.

"YOU DROP THAT! I'LL SHOOT!"

Perhaps because Abershaw was at such upon her mind she supposed that this to be the earl. He was bending over busy about some task. She approached him, where he stood in the dark shadow, and laid a hand upon his arm. He turned, with a gasp, a horrible sound, as if his lungs had burst within him. He leaned back against the wall and half upon the table, his knees too weak to support him and without voice to speak. Adelaide saw that he was a stranger. She knew instantly that he was a thief.

The spectacle of his subject terror calmed her. She stepped around the table, putting it between them, and she drew across to her side of it the ebony casket which the man had been trying to wrench open, not having found the secret spring which controlled the lid.

"You took this from the safe," said Adelaide. "Let me tell you that you have wasted your time. 'T've found it."

"Give me that!" cried the man in a hoarse whisper, and the next instant his hand was in his pocket, but he was trembling so that for some seconds he could not draw his revolver.

Adelaide knew what the wretch was after, and she realized her peril, or, at least, the obvious part of it. She did not know that a danger immeasurably greater lay in the ebony box which she held in her hand.

Yet the box was the source of the danger in one case just as in the other. If the man should shoot her it would be for that. The trained mind of the girl worked with a beautiful precision and pointed to the way of safety.

the affair could have only one explanation in the light of what Adelaide had observed had tried to blow up the safe by a bomb. The bomb casket, and nobody but Abershaw could have done it for doing such a thing. He did it to the last, but without producing any effect upon Linwood Farrington's judgment.

Mr. Farrington cherished a warm affection for his daughter Adelaide, and the thought of her dreadful peril made him to the degree that he was very near exposing the whole affair in the criminal courts. His wife's pleading prevailed, however, and the safe was not opened.

Adelaide's counsel was for silence. "What does it matter," said she, "now that I have saved from this miserable marriage?"

For the international wedding was off. It was as much as the advocates of peace and silence could do to prevent Farrington from fracturing the ear of his bones. A public version of the breaking off of the match was prepared and circulated by Mrs. Farrington. And did not their shameless wifery? The wreck of the dying Mercury was explained in the press without a hint of burglary, real or simulated. It was said that the bomb had been placed in the fountain by some miscreant of the Black Hand, who had tried to extort money from Mr. Farrington by threats.

N. B.—THREE FLIMFLAMMERS FOUND.

Do you remember years ago when the law was a blow that they could beat clouds with a gun And bring down water by the ton?

Ha, ha, ha, want that a sell, And did not their shameless wifery? They soaked them with an immense block of dry pretty watered stock.

Then suddenly the three lit out But to no one knew just where about. But, say, I've found the three once more, All playing dumb as before.

The one is a paid collector, But smiles are kept in tight. He'll let one loose to cheer your soul, But you can't get him up the nose.

The second manufacturer fun And wants a check for every pen. He has laughs piled by the peck, But first, "Please hand me over that check."

Oh, ha, ha, ha, Oh, he, he, he! The joke will be the death of me! This funny thought that one must pay For old, state jokes to make him gay!

Then, number three, he sits on high In office building, where he's found. And gives to those that till the ground The wondrous secrets he has found—

"If roosters are fed new mown hay They'll lay eggs in a twinkling. If plowing is done in this way You'll open up a rich gold mine."

O city taming, what a muse! That red-hot air you sell in chunks Makes splendid wares for the ducks!

Origin of Firewater.

When the Hudson Bay Trading Company began its trading among the Indians it was found that by selling the Indians whisky they could more easily be induced to trade their peltries. The first whisky or intoxicant of inferior quality was distilled in England and brought to America in large barrels, but in transporting it overland it was found more convenient to divide it into small kegs. The traders soon became aware of the fact that by diluting the whisky with water, more fun could be obtained. This was practiced for some time, but the Indians learned that good whisky poured on a fire would turn it into smoke. When the Indians had the whisky they had been given they would be quenched. It was by this simple experiment that the term "firewater" became a common word among the Indians and has been used ever since the bad effects of whisky among his people said it was most certainly distilled from the hearts of wildcats.

"I'LL GET HIM YET," SAYS GIRL ELOPER.

Mother of Sixteen-Year-Old Boy, of Oak, Frustrated Second Attempt.

Miss Violet Shutes, aged 19 years, and pretty, and Charles Pease, aged 16, both of Oak, Pa., were arrested at Reading by Sergeant Germain, on the charge of eloping.

Chief Levan received a message from the mother of young Pease to be on the lookout for the pair. They were taken into custody at the home of an aunt of the youthful lover.

The girl was much dismayed at the unsuccessful outcome of their plans and remarked: "I'll get him yet." This was the second time the couple attempted to get married. Some time ago they went to Wilmington, Del., but were intercepted by the boy's mother.

The couple returned to Oak with the mother of young Pease. J. P. Hale Jenkins, a member of the Valley Forge Park Commission, and his daughter, Miss Lella, are both practicing lawyers at the Montgomery county bar. A client of the daughter has a claim against her father, as executor of an estate, and the father refused to pay the claim, amounting to $220, the daughter brought suit against him at Norris-town for the amount.

Mrs. Thomas Hart, of Doylestown, who has been sick the past month, is slowly improving and is now able to be around the room.

Miss Sarah Radcliff, Doylestown, has been re-elected teacher of the primary school at Yardley, and Miss Marie Radcliff has been re-elected teacher at Johnsville.

As Mrs. William Neis was on the lawn in the rear of East Court street, Doylestown, Pa., Saturday evening she was struck by an owl, and the bird repeated the attack a minute or so afterward breaking every tooth of a large comb she wore in her hair.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Worthington, wife of Thomas Worthington, of Three Tuns, was held Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church of Doylestown. The services were conducted by Rev. A. W. Gilmore, of Allentown, N. J., a former pastor of the church. The remains were interred in Friends' burying grounds at Gardenville. The deceased was formerly a resident of Doylestown.

TIMELY RECIPES

These are the days when the housekeeper begins to think seriously about her fruit closet and the empty shelves to be filled. She realizes with what a feeling of satisfaction she will go and select a glass of jelly and preserves later when the cold weather has whisked all the berries from the market. Blackberry and strawberry jam and pineapple marmalade are all on the canning schedule now.

BLACKBERRY JAM.

Wash and drain a gallon of blackberries. Cook in a preserving kettle with a pint of water until soft, stirring and mashing the fruit with a wooden spoon. Remove, press through a wire sieve into a stone jar. Take a quart of the pulp, put into a kettle with a quart of sugar, bring to a boil, cook rapidly for twenty minutes, pour into small jars and seal when cold. Repeat the process until all the pulp is used.

PINEAPPLE MARMALADE.

Slice, pare and cut ripe, sweet pineapple into small pieces. Allow three-fourths point of sugar to each pound of fruit, mix in granite bowl, and allow to stand over night. In the morning cook gently for an hour, then press through a coarse sieve. Cook half an hour until clear and golden, and place in small stone pots.

HOW TO MAKE STRAWBERRY JAM

Allow to a quart of fruit washed and hulled three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Cook the fruit in a preserving kettle half an hour, stirring frequently. Add the sugar, boil twenty minutes, skim well and put in strainer jar while boiling hot. Keep in a cool, dry place. A pint of red currant juice added to every four pounds of berries is a delicious combination.

DOCTORS BANQUET.

The Montgomery County Medical Society held its banquet Friday evening at Three Tuns Inn. The members and guests were conveyed to the inn in automobiles.

The president of the association, Dr. William C. Miller, of Norristown, acted as toastmaster, and the following responded to toasts: Drs. J. K. Weaver, Wood, Babcock, Carroll, Martin, Britz, and Alia, Higley, Wilson, Elmer and Pownall.

John Massey, employed on a farm in Whitpain township, has been admitted to Charity Hospital, Norristown, suffering from blood poisoning. Several days ago he ran a rusty nail in his foot.

Howard Clark, of Jamison, a former school teacher in Doylestown and a well-known athlete, was hit by a pitched ball on the left side of his face and was so badly injured that it was necessary to take him to a hospital in Philadelphia. It was at first thought he would lose the sight of his left eye, but hopes are now entertained that the sight will be saved.

Judge Solly at Norristown, Tuesday morning handed down an adjudication in the estate of George A. Johnson, who was murdered at the county jail on DuPont road, Norristown, August 31, 1909, and two of whose slaves, Frank Chisarine and Nick Martinez, were executed in the county prison one year ago last Friday. The estate was worth about $2500 and went to cousins of deceased.

POTATO POINTERS.

Hints on How to Prepare the Palatable Tuber.

Potatoes are wasted in the average household chiefly because there are few housekeepers who take the trouble to think about them at all. With the chef realizes that in this vegetable he has what may easily be made a palatable and most important addition to the menu, the ignorant and usually thrifty cook pares her potatoes far too thickly, cooks them with indifference and wastes what might easily be good and nourishing food.

Out of fully 250 recipes it is not very difficult to add new ones to the household menu, and yet how very few homes there are in which one ever sees anything but a boiled potato. Far too often it is badly boiled. To begin with, kinds should be chosen in accordance with the use to which the tuber is to be put. Starchy potatoes are best for plain boiling, waxy ones are more likely to turn out a success when sautéed.

The best part of the potato lies near the skin, and as a rule, peeling is carelessly done, so that it has been said that in great institutions, where large quantities of potatoes are peeled every day, the peeling is done in a special room. It is much better to use a special peeler than an ordinary knife for with the former it is impossible to pare too thickly.

A mistaken idea is abroad that it is economical to be thrifty in the matter of butter or good fat for cooking, such as stewing or frying. Far too many housewives grudge even a lump of butter for mashed or roasted potatoes.

They fail to understand that this vegetable requires to be supplemented by fat to make it nourishing; they fail, too, to realize that the butter is spent in a reasonable way on food is money saved. Wise expenditure where food is regarded, in its broad sense, as health and force producing material makes dishes palatable. It is better to have food eaten than to have it thrown away, and starchy food that is eaten secures good health for those who enjoy it. In Europe housekeepers make a point of laying aside at the pork season a store of fat for use in winter. All odd pieces of fat are clarified and where butter is considered too costly, utilized for frying. Butter is supposed to be very nourishing, and vegetable prepared with it is considered the place of meat. Potatoes boiled in water are excellent when eaten with meat, but where butter is used, it is better to have food eaten than to have it thrown away, and starchy food that is eaten secures good health for those who enjoy it. The Father of the Fourth of July

Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, often styled the "Father of the Fourth of July," was born in Shadwell, Albemarle County, Va., April 2, 1743, and died at Monticello July 4, 1826, the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. John Adams died the same day.

In youth he was rawboned and ungainly, in early manhood better looking and in later life became fairly handsome. Peale's portrait of him is noted.

Jefferson drafted the Declaration of Independence, which was composed by himself and his four colleagues on the committee, Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston. The document was debated in Congress July 2, 3 and 4, and was only adopted then because the members had become weary from the long strain.

"Never in my life," wrote one of Jefferson's grandchildren, "did I see his countenance distorted by a single bad passion or unworthy feeling. To the contrary, it was impossible to look on his face without being struck with its benevolent, intellectual, cheerful and placid expression."

HATBORO HOME HAPPENINGS

GOENTNER FARM SALE BLOCKED.

The sale of the Goentner farm to Dr. Charles Seltzer has been upset. Objection was filed to the confirmation of the sale in court at West Chester on Monday, by William K. Goentner, of Hatboro, one of the heirs, who alleged insufficient price, lack of authority to sell by the executors, also that he was dissuaded from bidding higher at the public sale, by the executors and their attorney.

The effect of this action will be to make another sale necessary. This time it is likely that an order of sale will be obtained from the orphan's court, which it is said was not done for the former sale.

The farm was sold at executors' sale on March 25, 1911, as a tract of 100 acres more or less, partly in Hatboro and partly in Moreland. It was purchased by Dr. Charles Seltzer for $12,000. Dr. Seltzer owns three other farms and is the largest land owner in this section. Since his purchase of the Goentner place he has had it thoroughly surveyed and is reported to have sold a number of building lots. His plans for the development of the property will be blocked by the court's failure to confirm the sale.

MAN FRIGHTFULLY BEATEN.

stating he would return, after purchasing clothing at Halliwell's store. Hughes also stated that Jamison had called upon him on Sunday, being sent there by Halliwell, to remove the body of Coons. Jamison told Hughes he had punched Coons in the mouth and eye. Coons also had a small silver watch when he left the Hughes place.

James Jamison, the accused, made a brief statement as follows: Left Willow Grove on the 12:26 trolley car alone, got off at Halliwell on the platform, went towards barn, and turned to go under wagon shed, when he heard a noise and asked "Who's there?" Received no answer, but got a cut over eye from knife and was also strangled by throat. He broke away from Coons and hit him in face with fist and knocked him down. Coons got up and came at him again, and Jamison grabbed a shovel handle and struck him a blow which felled him to the ground. Told him to get up and go home, as he had no business there. He got up for the third time and staggered some distance and fell. Laid in barn yard till daylight, when Jamison removed him under cover, out of the rain. He found the man was badly hurt. He also stated that he hit Coons on legs with club.

Squire Hickman committed Jamison to jail under the charge of murder, for October term of court. All witnesses were also held for their appearance at court.

Constable Palmer took the prisoner to Norristown at once. Corner King will hold an inquest on Wednesday, July 5, at the Court House. The District Attorney will be present.

TREVOSE

On Saturday evening last Albert Rosen gave a surprise party and dinner in honor of the natal day of Edith, his wife. Among those present were the following named relatives and others: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Tomlinson, the Misses Ida Florence and Elma Tomlinson, Harry Warren Tomlinson, wife and children, Trevoze, Mrs. Flora and Margaret Harwood, Churchville, Charles Kupke, Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Crossen and Mr. Penno, Fox Chase, Charles Trevoze, and also the accomplished sisters of Mr. Rosen, the Misses Mary, Ida and Laura Rosen, of Lawndale. Miss Mary has been connected with the grand opera house, Philadelphia, since its completion by Hammerstein, and her reminiscences of the great artists who have therein appeared, were intensely interesting as well as instructive. This charming trio of girls belong to one of the best choirs of the Quaker City's cathedral, and they gave sweet accompaniment to some of the operatic selections rendered by Charles E. Schuyler under the Victoria. From convenient hiding places were produced flowers, plants and fanciful ribbons by which the dining room was decorated and transformed. And there issued from other nooks dishes as delicate as dry hampers and other receptacles, which, being unladen, filled the capacious table with a variety of dainties in a veritable bride's cake, suitably inscribed. Really, it was a most happy occasion, well inspired and delightfully carried out. And from the opening recitation "La Jolie Parmafense," by Miss Ida Rosen, until the last sip of the Sorbet a la Reine, at the mystic hour of twelve, there was something doing every minute.

It was "just before the battle, mother," that the La Motte Giants telephoned that they could not be with us on the 10th. A letter up was sent on the 10th. This being our first defeat, we are bearing up bravely. King sent for them and Vannant yours truly. Terry, our automobile expert, spat on the ball as usual, but without result. Worthington, our Bob, was then sent in but fell by the wayside there being spots in the sun. Meanwhile, Eddie Wood of Somerton, worked the peanut game, and Russell Tomlinson, of Trevoze, gave away large chunks of ice cream. We have it from Old Sport, alias Bircy Sande, that the x-Giants will make their appearance on July 2. Turn out, fans, and help us to help ourselves.

An entertainment will be given in the Trevoze auditorium on Monday night, July 3rd. Several well-known society people are in the cast of an exciting two-act comedy entitled, "A Perplexing Situation" wherein the hero guarantees the payment of fifty bucks to the several heretics, if only they will keep quiet for a few hours. Mr. Chester, as leading man, will give suitable histrionic force to the role of the gentleman who offers the wad.

Miss Sweetest, among others, will try and earn the money. But many are asking, "Could these girls succeed? It is not necessary to read the answer in the stars, is the consensus of opinion."

Thirty-two members of the Temple Guild, Broad and Davis, came to our town on Saturday last and are encamped on the grounds of the Trevoze Club. These boys are offered the following: Willard Gird, captain; Albert Sadler, first lieutenant; Russell Eberhart, second sergeant. They will remain here until the ninth of July.

Their uniforms is of the latest pattern, in accordance with military regulations and the rifles are the old forty-five Springfield. Expenses are defrayed from the wages of the entertainments given in the city, sundry sales, etc.

Their marching is most precise and with the precision of the military is inspiring. Their marksmanship is also remarkably accurate and every day much of the time is given to target practice, east of Simpson's grove.

Albert H. Paul, Walter Carroll and William McCarter Nesbitt, of Trevoze, whose skill with the rifle and other weapons has been obtained through several years' target practice, are piloting the members of Temple Guard around this vicinity.

These boys have also had much experience in trap shooting, as well as the more serious handling of the rifle and the use of the mountains, and on the Chesapeake. The depressed crescent, where the Short Line wire forms a merry go round, makes an admirable range, the distance being two hundred and sixty yards.

The butcher house of F. H. Keller, at Telford, was entered and about $20 worth of meats stolen, the third time the place was entered within a short time.
